Ordering Food Fractions

We would start off by discussing real life food examples of simplifying fractions, such as, "We paid $50 for 10 hamburgers, which means each hamburger costs $5 because $50/$10=5."

I would ask each of the students to talk about their favorite type of food. Then I would ask each of the students in each group to pick one of the four menu options that serves their type of food.

Then they would look at that restaurant's food menu and pretend order some food. Then they would discuss in their group much their meal costs and how much the total bill is for the whole group. Then they would use ratios and fractions to figure out how much their meal cost compared to the total cost of what was ordered. I would explain to them that each person should take the total cost of their meal and divide it by the total cost of everyone's meals combined. I would write the following formula on the board:

Cost of my meal/cost of total group's meal=(sum of my food cost)/(sum of everyone in group's food cost)

I would ask each group to draw a picture of their meal and each member in the group on a piece of paper. Then they would visually show how much each student ate and how much their portion cost.

Supplies Needed:

Menu papers

Pictures/pencils/art supplies

Copies of the 4 different food menus. I put two on a page so you can conserve paper and cut them all in half so there are more for the students.
